What we collect

It's in Tools of the Trade's legitimate business interest to keep its customers, suppliers and contacts informed of our latest content, products and services and to manage and administer their purchases.

We process customer and client data and use direct marketing as part of this legitimate interest. It's necessary for us to use a variety of direct marketing channels and messages to ensure our contacts are kept informed and wherever possible we make sure the messages we send are targeted and relevant. Any direct marketing we undertake complies with e-privacy rules on consent.

We will keep your data safely and securely for as long as necessary or according to your instructions, and we review the data we hold at least once every two years. If you'd like more information about how we store your data, please contact us directly.

We may collect the following information:

- Name and job title
- Contact information including email and business postal addresses
- Other information relevant to daily business activities, including customer surveys

What we do with the information we gather

We require this information to understand your needs and provide you with a better service, and in particular for the following reasons:

- Internal record keeping.
- We may use the information to improve our products and services.
- We may periodically send promotional emails and brochures about new products, special offers or other information which we think you may find interesting using the contact information provided.
- From time to time, we may also use your information to contact you for market research purposes. We may contact you by email, phone, fax or mail.

Security

We are committed to ensuring that your information is secure. In order to prevent unauthorised access or disclosure, we have put in place suitable physical, electronic and managerial procedures to safeguard and secure the information we collect.
